HONGROND, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1892.

THE brief telegram which we publish to-day. Lord Tennyson is doad, announces a loss to Great Britain and the world which will be widely felt. In the nature of things, the event could not have been regarded as one that was likely to be fer off, but its arrival nevertheless awakens a feeling of sadness and a consciousness that the world has been made poorer by the removal of a min to whom a vast number of his fellows lacked up with reverence and admiraexemplified much of what is noble in human nature, and who by his work in Cantou Insurance Office, Ltd. at Messra | the high vocation of Poet, using with pure and lofty purpose the gifts with which he was so richly endowed, did perhaps more than any other man to St. John's Cathedral -Parade Service elevate thought and give dignity to than any other poet among those who are entitled to be called great, Tennyson enjoyed wide popularity in his life-

Union Church, Kennedy Road.-Min- time. It has not been left to posterity be asserted with positiveness that there is no educated man or woman in Great Britain or in the Greater Britain beyond, 7.30 a.M.; and on the 4th, at the Evening a greater or lesser degree the influence of Tennyson's poetry. Even among those WESLEVAN METHODIST CHURCH.—Divine who do not claim English as their mother tongue, there are many by whom the British Poet Laureate was known and manded the attention of the civilised GERMAN BETHESDA CHAPEL-Service in world and was listened to with delight Chapel of the Berlin Foundling House, while when Tennyson sang. More than sixty years ago, when a little volume appeared, bearing on the title-page Poems, chiefly Lyrical-by Alfred Tennyson,' John Stuart Mill, in the course of a criticism in the Westminster Review. wrote:- That these poems will have a very rapid and extensive popularity we do not anticipate. Their very originality will prevent their being generally appreciated for a time. But that time will come, we hope, for they demonstrate the possession of powers to the future direction of which we look with some unxiety.' This opinion as to the prospects of Tennyson's poems turned out to well-founded. Equally just was the estimate which the reviewer formed of the poet's character and of the poet's conception of his vocation :- 'Mr Tennyson-knows that the poet's mind is holy ground, he knows that the poet's portion is to be "dowered with the hate of hate, the scorn of scorn, the love of love"; he has shown . . . the just conception of the grandeur of a poet's destiny; and we look to him for its fulfilment. It is not for such men to sink into mere verse-makers for the amusement of themselves or others. They can influence the association of unnumbered minds; they can command the sympathies of unnumbered hearts; they can disseminate their principles; they can give those principles power over men's imagination; they can excite in a good cause the sustained enthusiasm that is sure to conquer: they can blust the laurels of the tyrants and hallow the memories of the martyrs of patriotism: they can net with a force, the extent of which it is difficult to estimate, upon national feelings and character, and consequently upon national happiness. If our estimate of Mr Tennyson be correct, he is indeed a poet of that description. There may be difference of opinion as to the rank which Tennyson is outified to take as a poet, but there can be none with regard to the faithfulness with which he followed his own high ideal of the poet's mission and uttered the message which he believed he was entrusted to deliver. Of him it might be said that his task was fully accomplished before he was called away. He could contemplate the approach of death with serenity. His removal reminds us how brief a space in the closing years of the century has sufficed for the extinguishing of three of the brightest lights of literature-Carlyle, Browning, Tennyson. The world will not look for another Carlyle, another Browning or another Tennyson. The old leaders pass away and the spirit of the time changes. The dead and assists the process of assimilation, Poet Laureate's parting words might fittingly have been those of Arthur :-

The old order changeth, yielding place to new,
And God fulfils himself in many ways,
Leet one good custom should corrupt the world.
Comfort thyself: what comfort is in me!
I have lived my life, and that which I have done.

DEATH OF THE POET LAUREATE. Lord Tempyson is dead.

[We take the following from Men of the Time: Tennyson, Alfred (Lord Ten-nyson), D.C.L., F.R.S., Poet Laureste, third son of the late Rev. Q. C. Tennyson, the elder brother of the late Right Hon. C. Tennyson D'Eyncourt, was born in 1597 | 1809, at his father's parsouage, at Somer-

by Lincolnshire; his mother, who died in 1865, being a daughter of the Rov. Stephen Fytche. He was educated by his Hymns, 126, 155, 285; Praim, 63 (Barrow); father, and in due course proceeded to Trinity College, Cambridge. In 1829 he gained the Chancellor's Medal by a poem in blank verse, entitled 'Timbuctoo. With the exception of a volume of poems published in conjunction with his brother Charles, when they were boys, and a prize poem, composed whilst au undergraduate at Cambridge, Mr Tennyson did not publish anything till 1830, when 'Poems chiefly Lyrical appeared, and from 1842 the steady and rapid growth of his fame may be traced. The two volumes then issued were in part merely a republication, but the most important poems were those added to his former productions. It was at once apparent that the author of the "Morte d'Atthur," Locksley Hall," the May Queen, and the Two Voices, was entitled to take the first rank among English poets, a reputation which was more than sustained by the two great works S. During this half-year the Company have for the first time undertaken to supply all provisions and necessaries to the minera which in the former period was done by a Chinese contractor. This explains the item of $20,053 for stores in stock for sale to miners, and also the heavier expenses under the heading 'additions to property,' as the new arrangement necessituted the building of an iron godown and fornishing of a store at Jelebu and the purchase of land and erection of a transit godown and office at Seramban. This store business has thus far worked satisfactorily and the profits are largor than the commission formerly returned to the Company by the contractor. After paying all charges, making full

General Agents. A TIGER AND BULL FIGHT.

ATROCIOUS CRUELTY.

The Straits Times gives the following translation from a Batavia paper describing the scene at a ' tiger and bull fight,' a kin of 'aport' which, judging by the following account, seems for debasing and disgusting cruelty, to be quite unique. The . performance, here described is certainly a disgrace to the (presumably) civilized Roresentative of a civilised Government under whose auspices it took place :-

The Batavia Nieuwshald of the 23rd September gives particulars of an official tiger and buffalo fight that took place at Padang Panjang in the Residency of the West Coast of Sumatra early this month. The Assistant Resident of the district had determined upon giving this performance to the people owing to the capture of a large tigress in that neighbourhood. The tigress had vainly been offered to the zoological gardens at Batavia and Amsterdam, and by the time of the fight had lost much of her fierceness. The people of the place got together stout bamboos to fence round the arens, a cir-78 cular piece of ground more than 30 feet broad, with galleries for spectators who were charged admission fees. A few weeks before the tight the Assistant Resident seemed a tiger, and the people provided two stout buffsless to measure themselves in the arena with it and the tigress. On the day of battle crowds thronged the arena into which the tigress stepped at about 10 a.m. to meet a butfale. The latter quietly held its own against the tigress which, reduced by her long im prisonment, showed no inclination for further attack. To stir them up both animals were pricked now and then with bam-THE Straits Times of the 1st inst. says:- -- boo darts. This buffalo aided by its comrade, attacked the tiger which soon had enough of it and sought safety by clambering up the palisading until several spear thrusts made it let go. No amount of urging with pricks, thrusts, and fire, proved of any avail in arousing the champions to battle, until the prolonged forture being the first-half-51 the fourth year of of the tiger was ended by killing it with spears. THE GRAND OLD MAN. In his capacity for, and habit of, throwng all his soul and body into whatever business he undertakes lies the secret of Mr Gladstone's commanding force and influence. Whatever he is doing or discussing at a particular moment is regarded by him a matter worthy of the concentrathough good in itself implies a lack of andignified, even ridiculous. In the House of Commons it has come to be a wellknown fact, happily less patent now than it was ten years ago, that any one, however insignificant, can 'draw Gladstone. That are several men, not all as eminent as Lord Randolph Churchill, who directly awe Itheir political advancement to this weakness on the part of a great man. At the present time there is a gentleman comfortably provided for as a judge at the Indian Mutiny, more about another mutiny. Antipodes, whose sole claim to recognition by the Government of the day was that when Mr Gladstone rose to address the House this otherwise inarticulate member used to shout 'Oh! oh!' or 'Ah! sh!' Such an interruption would not in the least have disconcerted Mr Disraeli when he occupied a similar position. He would have ignored it from the first, and the gentleman in question would never have to my native village and settled down. Two been a colonial judge. Mr Gladstone years afterwards I began to feel languid and when thus assailed was wont to halt in his tired. I lost all spirit and energy. Everything speech, display irritation, and sometimes | was a trouble to me, and I became weak and personally address the wholly inconsider- low. At first I had a had taste in the mouth, able interrupter, so encouraging him to no appetite for food, and what I ats gave me persist. With all his learning he has pain in the chest and back. I also had a dall never mastered the philosophy of the ancient saying that an eagle does not catch

Mr Gladstone remains to this day what he was even in Mr Bright's prime, the allured by by-paths of illustration or commentary, sometimes fails to find. But when it comes to lofty and sustained oratory Mr Gladstone is inapproachable. This is shown in half a dozen ways. One, peculiar and convincing, appears in connection with the daty which from time to time calls upon a leader of the House to lament the death of an eminent member. Mr Disraeli felt the difficulty of this situation so acutely that on a famous occasion he borrowed from a French statesman Bright when he rose to speak to the House of Commons of his dead friend Cobden was movingly eloquent. But it was the eloquence of broken speech and faltering tongue. The last occasion on which this duty was performed in the House of Commons followed upon the death of John Bright, and as, owing to populiar circummembers who spoke, Mr Chamberlain ranked lowest, his method of approaching the subject, and certain passages of his the House. The brief speeches of Mr W. pain. H. Smith and Lord Hartington were After my recovery many of my neighbours chord, and throughout his speech playe upon it, satisfying the exacting taste of the audience.

It is on occasions such as this the House of Commons sees through the haze of party conflict how noble are the proportions of the figure that has dwelt amongst it for more then fifty years, and how wide will be the space created when it finally withdraws from the scene. - H. W. Lucy in the English Illustrated.

A VEGETABLE OCTOPUS.

The following story is taken from the Honolulu Advertiser, and narrates the par row escape of a botanist in the employ of the Belgian Government from a vegetable octopus in Hawaii:-'I was in search of a certain rare wandering plant that was believed to grow on found wonderful benefit. the higher slopes of Mauna Kea, a large extinct volcano situated in the northern part of Hawaii. My only companion was a native who had lived all his life on this part of the island. During one of my botanising excursions I passed by the mouth of a narrow canon, or gorge, and, naturally. I determined to examine into the mysterious ravine. Some time after this l was walking with Pili down a gentle slope, when I saw a number of bones-a circular area of about a hundred yards in diameter, thickly covered with the bleached. remains of birds, animals, and human beings. These ghastly relies were scattered among the shrubs and grass. In the centre of the circle was a well-like opening in the ground, from which emanated a sickening odour. No vegetation grew within tifty feet of this cavity. A deep mystery seemed to hang over the spot. It was growing extremely debilitated, the doctors being of dark, and hearing Pili call, I hurried to him. He pointed in terror to the centre of the bone-covered area. I saw rising from the pit a visible vapour, a column of visible fog orsmoke or gas that was luminous. Near the ground it had the appearance of a phosphorescent flame, and gradually became fainter as it ascended. Pili pulled at my arm and in silence we left the spot, One evening I made known my intention to Pili to return to the place in the morning and to explore the gorge. Without a word the old native aross from his mat on the floor and departed. He was gone all night. He returned by sunrise, bearing on his shoulders a bundle. He unpacked a stone idol, curious in shape; he placed it on the ground and then took a small pig from his bundle. Making a fire, he sprinkled something in the flame, muttered strange sounds, and made symbols in the air with nervousness vanished altogether. I took about his fingers. The animal offering was twelve bottles of Clements Tonic, and my pale placed before the idol. After he had face is now replaced with the has of health, and completed his strange rites he said that I my recovery is as complete as it was speedy." what he could to preserve my life. All this made me feel uncomfortable

But I went. I had gone about a mile. when over the tops of tree ferns I saw a waving mass of sea-green foliage undulating in the wind. The object looked like a of Fletcher's pills affected a radical cure, and I hage bunch of thick-leaved seaweed, and shall always be glad to certify accordingly. the peculiar motion of the same arrested roy attention. I got weaker and weaker, and had way of going straight to a point and ham. to give up work and engage a man to look after mering it down which Mr Gladstone, my small business. I took medicines of various kinds, but obtained little or no relief. I then saw the club doctor, who gave no medicines a d applications, but I found no ease from anything except for a little while. After being under this doctor off and on for four years I gave up going to him and went to see a dector at Bangay, and was under his treatment for three months. He gave me medicines and embrocations, and I was rubbed before the fire for hours together by my
